CHINESE APPEAR TO BE HOLDING OWN AT WOOSUNG

Japanese Bombardment Continues; No Sign of Cessation

FIRES CONTINUE

Japanese Warships Continue Activities from Whangpoo River

SHANGHAI, Feb. 4.—Leading hosts of Japanese artillery and the huge guns of Japanese warships in the Whangpoo River beat away at Chinese defense in Shanghai today. With the approach of darkness, the Japanese bombardment continued without any sign of cessation after virtually an all-day attack. The Chinese lines appeared to be holding their own both in the Chapei area and at Woosung, 14 miles north, where a detachment of Chinese artillery were stationed in back of the shattered walls of the Woosung Fort. Down to pieces during a terrific aerial bombardment yesterday.

By Dixon Hoste
(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

SHANGHAI, Feb. 4, 4:30 P. M.—(INS)—Japanese forces launched a terrific attack on Shanghai today, directing a dual fire on the battle torn Chapei section and the North Station, and on the Woosung Forts at the mouth of the Whangpoo River.

The heaviest guns Japan has yet used on Shanghai went into action in a general artillery and machine gun bombardment. The Chinese replied feebly with smaller pieces.

Japanese airplanes, engaging in a new form of attack, the dropping of incendiary bombs to set fire to Chinese properties, gave the International Settlement the most serious menace it has yet met.

One bomb struck a Chinese house within the Settlement boundary, and it burst into flames immediately. Municipal firemen fought valiantly to localize the blaze, which threatened to spread among other Chinese dwellings within the Settlement.

Under cover of heavy firing on the Woosung forts, a party of Japanese marines landed and advanced to the forts. They did not occupy the forts immediately, withdrawing on learning that the Chinese guns there were out of action and harmless. The forts were demolished in yesterday's attack.

It was reported Japanese warships shelled the Chinese railroad at Chingwang, midway between Shanghai and Woosung.

The Japanese planes inflicted terrific damage on their newest attack on the North Station area, adjoining the International Settlement.

Japanese headquarters reported two companies of their marines were trapped by Chinese behind the Roku-san Gardens, at the northern boundary of the Settlement. The marines were out on a sortie expedition and were unable to return.

Foreign sources united in declaring yesterday's report of the sinking of a Japanese destroyer was false.

While Japanese officials called the report "ridiculous," others who saw the battle declared the Chinese gunfire was very feeble and that no shells were seen to fall in the vicinity of the Japanese ships.

Japanese marines evacuated their posts within the American sector of the International Settlement, which United States marines took over. The Japanese also withdrew from the British sector.

The Japanese aerial bombardment was going full blast at two o'clock this afternoon, eight hours after it started, in conjunction with the artillery fire. The Chinese counterforce also had been under way for eight consecutive hours.

Japanese marines were hampered by the weather and consequent poor visibility from determining the exact location of all the Chinese firing batteries. They tried to do this by sound.

One unusual shot was also in its eighth hour at 2:00 p. m., was between a Chinese armored train and a Japanese destroyer. The armored train approached the destroyer and opened fire.

Japanese officials said the attack on the Woosung forts was for the purpose of clearing the river for navigation to and from Shanghai.

Where Quake Spread Havoc and Death

Above is the scene of the disastrous earthquake that practically wiped out the entire city of Santiago, Cuba. Though the temblor lasted but thirty seconds, so severe was the shock that almost every building in the city was either razed or damaged. It is estimated that over 200 lives were lost in the cataclysmic half minute. The last census of the city gives the population as 160,000 persons. This was the first quake experienced in Santiago since 1852. Relief has already been sent to the scene of the disaster and troops have been sent from Havana to keep order and prevent looting in the stricken area. These views show, top, the harbor at Santiago; lower is a typical street scene.

OIL TANKER EXPLODES; THREE DEAD ARE FOUND

More Fatalities Are Expected Momentarily by Searching Parties

FIVE IN THE HOSPITAL

CHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4.—(INS)—The death toll had mounted to three at 7:30 a. m. today and further fatalities were expected momentarily in the blowing up of the oil tanker Bidwell off Marcus Hook shortly after midnight. At least five members of the crew are in a critical condition in Chester Hospital.

With the coming of daylight a search of the Delaware River in the vicinity of where the blackened bulk of the tanker still smoldered in the half light of early day was started. It is feared more victims will be found along the river front as several members of the crew were still unaccounted for.

The known dead are: Stephen Marks, 28, of Philadelphia; Roy Hamilton, 30, of Marietta, Ga.; Edward Russell, 35, Marcus Hook; Capt. Rivers, skipper of the oil tanker.

Marks was pronounced dead upon admission to Crozer Hospital. Hamilton and Russell succumbed in Chester Hospital shortly before dawn. The injured are in the Chester Hospital. They include:

Mrs. Viola Rivers, wife of the missing captain, of Jamaica, N. Y., burns and shock, condition serious.

William Major, 34, Chester, burns, condition serious.

Lee McMahon, 27, Fostoria, Tex., burns, condition critical.

Edward Gielow, 32, a seaman from Indiana, burns, critical.

Olaf Rasmussen, 31, of Marcus Hook, burns, critical.

Only sketchy accounts were available this morning of the blasts which tore the tanker apart. Most of the survivors agreed, however, that the first explosion was the most serious and followed in a second explosion which hurled all aboard into the river or on to the pier nearby.

No one knows what really caused the first blast.

According to some of the surviving members of the crew a "short crew" of the Sinclair Oil Company, which is reported to have chartered the tanker from the Sun Company, had gone aboard the vessel at midnight. They were pumping out the tanks preparatory to cleaning them before the next cargo was taken aboard. They had just opened No. 6 Tank when it went up. The second blast followed as the experienced members of the crew fought desperately to leap from the flaming ship as they knew a second blast was inevitable.

The second blast, a most terrific one, which rattled windows and buildings over a 20-mile radius, came, however, before the men could leap free of the vessel.

THE IN-AND-OUTER

Nobody likes the in-and-outer. You can't tell where he is going to be next. He is always a nuisance and sometimes a peril, and in this last capacity he shows himself most frequently as a motorist.

The motoring in-and-outer is always in a hurry. He feels that he is more in a hurry than anyone else on the street. Of course, he probably is going nowhere in particular and will have nothing in particular to do when he arrives, but he is in a hurry.

So he darts out of line and cuts in. His safety depends on the other fellow's good brakes. Sometimes he gains as much as a tenth of a second at the expense of everybody else's comfort and peace of mind.

Experience proves that his rate of progress is not much higher than that of the orderly, decent, courteous driver. He dashes ahead and in and out and across everybody's path from the first showing of the amber light. But he is held up by the red at the next important crossing. At the first intimation of a change of signal he bares his horns as a warning to the rest of the world to make room for him.

In the dense traffic of the city he marks his trail with bruised fenders and hub caps and ruined tempers. But in the country, where the speed limit is less exacting, he knows no limit, and there he too frequently signals his time-saving achievements by tragedy. The in-and-outer is responsible for more of the motor accidents than any other factor. His control and suppression form the biggest problem in the safety program.

GROWTH OF SAVINGS

Mutual savings bank deposits in the United States increased $565,281,893 last year over 1930, a growth that would have been remarkable even in more prosperous and stable times.

Last year's gain brought total deposits to an all-time record of $10,639,014,383 and total assets to $11,208,875,747, providing reserves of $1,123,253,973. Depositors increased 581,179 and the average account reached $750.77, as against $749.85 the previous year.

In view of the large number of national and state banks that failed in 1931 the record of the mutual savings banks of not one failure and of a 100 per cent maintenance of dividend payments at a national average of 4.32 per cent is remarkable indeed.

It is doubtful if such a vast sum of capital ever has been handled in a similar period without a dollar loss or a dividend passed. Banking history has been made.

These banks stand today as one of the bulwarks of national financial security. They are both a safety valve and a source of fuel to the economic and financial engines of the country.

No news may be good news, but no luck is bad luck.

Heresy is what you are guilty of if you can't persuade the majority to side with you.

Pity those who cannot read and haven't wit enough to form an opinion. They are sure to be drawn on the jury.

Ted is attracted to Morales' beautiful niece, Adela. "El Coyote" sends his lieutenant to urge the ranchers to join him in overthrowing Morales. Jito, Morales' ward, warns him he will lose power unless "El Coyote" is killed. At Morales' festa, Ted bluntly asks his host if he benefited by his father's ruin. Morales replies that Ted's father was his friend. Jealous of Adela's interest in Ted, Jito challenges him to a wrestling match. Ted wins. He is relieved to know Adela is not angry.

CHAPTER XVIII

But just as they reached the car she stopped and looked earnestly up at him. "Don't take too seriously what I'm going to say. And Jito don't like it. When you and I stood there face to face I had a feeling almost of dread. For it came over me that you two were destined enemies. That the two of you could never share this border country until one had conquered. And I want it so to be otherwise. Help me make it otherwise. Promise me you will avoid any quarrel, no matter how difficult that will be."

Ted started. He remembered his own instinctive sense of deep, inevitable antagonism against the man. But he only said: "Nonsense, Jito and I are going to be the best little playmates on earth."

"My friend, I know Jito better than anyone in the world. Better than he knows himself. Promise?"

"I promise I'll promise anything."

The smile and upward look were his reward.

"I wonder if she was really angry," Ted stopped as he dressed for dinner.

Bob looked out the great window of the guest room, where at that moment the glory of the setting sun was kindling all the western sky.

"Not so much angry as afraid. No. That's not the word, either. For Adela Morales isn't afraid of anything on earth. Apprehensive, perhaps. I think she sensed danger to you in Jito's anger."

"But he wasn't angry."

"Neither you nor I can say what was in Jito's mind. Not a very wise act, you know, to risk making an enemy of him, and I think Adela was troubled with that same thought. You see, Jito happens to be jealous of you."

"Of me? Don't be an ass."

"My boy, Jito would be jealous of Saint Anthony if Adela smiled at him in just the same fashion that she once or twice has smiled on you."

Then Don Bob laughed a little envious laugh at the quick flush on Ted's cheek and lighted still another of his cigarettes.

"But what do you make of Morales and his tale?"

"About father? I think he lied."

"I, too. But I'm wondering why he should be so painstakingly civil to you unless perhaps because of Adela."

"Isn't it because Morales finds it less burdensome to be friendly than otherwise? He strikes me as one of those who would rather forget all the unpleasant things of life, even the suffering he himself causes."

"Perhaps. Always provided he can get what he wants without causing suffering. But it's the end that counts with Paco Morales. He is one of the world's realists. That's why I wish you hadn't rolled Jito in the road. It hurt him in the eyes of his men. It hurt the prestige of Morales."

"Bob, you don't for a single moment mean that these people are dangerous, do you? It seems so unbelievable that this suave, courtly fellow could ever think in terms of murder. You don't mean that, do you?"

"I mean, Ted, you're in Mexico. You are in the borderland, where Morales is the law. There are too many signs of bad omen. For one thing, I think you're growing fond of Adela, and that won't be particularly appetizing to either Jito or Morales."

"Not even when they realize that a penniless man could hardly be insane enough to fall in love with one of the richest girls in Mexico?"

"That might make them feel better, but it wouldn't make a bit of difference to Adela."

"God bless her for that. And for your own peace of mind, I'll ask no one to share my home and fortune until I first acquire a home and fortune."

"Morales and Jito will both commend your resolution, old son. In the meantime, dash into those clothes. It's half-past cocktail hour, and that is one of the sacred institutions here."

But it was Ted who finished first. Running down the heavily carpeted stairs he came upon Adela standing by the tall western window, beyond which the last yellow streaks of sunlight were turning to purple and violet. He stopped, held breathless for a moment by the picture. For Adela, perhaps to please her uncle, had come down to dinner dressed in the fashion of the women of Spain. The gown itself was of shimmering black. Her hair, that shattered the fading sunlight into a thousand flames, was surmounted by a great amber comb, edged in jade. From her shoulders fell in soft folds a fringed Spanish shawl, pure white—a lustrous silky white—and embroidered on it a single red rose, about which clusters of silken leaves matched the jade of the comb. She stood there, tall and slender, looking out over the darkening desert, dimming, it seemed to him, even the sunlight with her loveliness. Once his lips parted to speak, but closed again.

She smiled up at him. "What were you thinking?"

He answered slowly. "I was thinking you're the most beautiful thing in the world."

Her eyes made him feel suddenly awkward and impatient at his own clumsiness.

"You learn Spanish ways very quickly, Ted Radcliffe."

He shook his head. "No, that wasn't Spanish. It's simply what I was thinking—on my honor. If I offended, I'm sorry, but I meant it quite sincerely. I meant just that—that to me, standing there as you are now—I have never seen anyone so beautiful."

She laughed into his eyes. "And by way of apology you repeat it four times. No, I am not offended. Perhaps I'm pleased. Every girl, whether she believes it or not. Only it sounds so terribly easy to say that sort of thing, and I don't like you to be too ready at saying nice things, even to me." She looked toward the stairs. "What do you think, Don Bob?"

He came slowly toward them. "Just now I think you're a very beautiful little lady," he announced gravely.

"That's downright plagiarism," objected Radcliffe. "I said it first."

A moment later Morales and Jito came from out the patio and Ted watched them with new interest. A striking pair, those two. The Spaniard poised and immaculate in his evening clothes, the Mexican almost grotesque, so huge he bulked beneath the stiff shirt and the black broadcloth. He seemed out of place in all that present-day clothing. He should have been some satyr, with great hairy legs, sprawling on a river bank.

Unhesitatingly Jito extended his hand. "Que va? You are a strong man, my friend. My neck still aches." He laughed and moved that great columnlike neck back and forth. "Once while I was at school in California there came a Yale wrestler, Avery his name was, a big farm lad. One night we wrestled for an hour. We pulled and twisted one another about. Dios! My neck hurt that night too, but at last I won. Yes, you are stronger than Avery."

"Is Señor Radcliffe stronger than you, Jito?" asked Morales, smiling. Jito shrugged. "It is as I said before. With this game of wrestling there are rules and prohibitions and clever tricks. He might beat me again, for I am not clever. Yet I think in the serious work of killing a man with my hands I would win. What you say, Mr. Radcliffe?"

Ted raised amused eyes to the Mexican. "What can I say? I have never killed a man with my hands."

"No? I have. It is not pretty, and yet there is joy in it."

Adela moved toward the door. "You may give us all the gory details at dinner, Jito."

Outside, beyond the patio, an orchestra was playing, and in the room beyond soft-footed servants bore them food and wine.

Jito had lapsed into silence, and Ted, after listening for a time to the soft complaining of the Spanish music, said to the girl beside him: "What a land of dreams and beautiful days and perfumed nights yours is. A land where it would be difficult not to be fan and brave and happy."

She made no answer. He looked across at the dark, thoughtful face of the Spaniard, and wondered what lay behind that courteous, unfathomable mask.

"I had hoped to have news for you, Don Bob," the Spaniard was saying. "News that would for me make tonight a night of fiesta indeed, but"—his queer, unequal face saddened—"that news is delayed."

Don Bob looked up. "It was about the Coyote? You had hoped to tell me he was captured?"

The other nodded. "You read the brain, señor. But not exactly his capture. No, I had hoped to tell you of his death."

"Are they then that near to him?"

"Major Blount has called every man from the garrison for a ten-day campaign of the border. Next week two squadrons of Mexican cavalry go with him, and together they will search out every inch of the hills to the south. I myself am working still another way. I have sent out six of my boys to mingle with the peons and the smaller ranchers and learn what this rebel chief's plans are. Monday I send Jito and all the men to join Blount for a search. Those bloodhound boys of mine, they are more eager to close with the bandits than all the others. They have suffered too much. And Jito—the old fellow looked affectionately at the big Mexican who bore him so strange a resemblance—"Jito is the most eager of all. He has—how you say?—dedicated himself to killing this Coyote, and I tell him that if he does I shall give him one hundred thousand pesos gold."

Where War Is Rumbling

This map shows the situation of the various settlements at Shanghai, now in the throes of disturbances between Japanese and Chinese. The shaded portion is the international settlement, peopled by Americans, British and French. Police of these nations maintain order in their own particular districts. To the north of the settlement is Chapel, inhabited by Chinese and a large number of Japs. This is the district where Japanese planes dropped their bombs. U. S. Marines and British troops are standing by inside the settlement to repel any invasion of their concessions.

Threatened by Jap Invaders

Shanghai's famous Bund (above) is the "Main Street" of the foreign quarter in the beleaguered city. It is here that American, British and French nationals are preparing to defend their lives and property against invasion by any of the warring Orientals. British Tommies and U. S. Marines are standing shoulder to shoulder to repel any attempt of the belligerents to make a cockpit out of their concessions. The Bund is totally unlike the popular conception of an Oriental city. Fronting Shanghai harbor, it is occidental in every respect.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.

After weeks of seeking, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has found a partner for Jackie Cooper in "Limpy."

And for once they've had to go outside their own fold. The actor who gets the job, providing Hollywood red tape doesn't tangle the deal, is Chic Sale.

Chic, of course, is under contract to Warner Brothers, and their consent has to be obtained. But as the part, that of a Civil War veteran, fits the actor perfectly, and as Chic's next Warner picture doesn't start until the middle of March, the plan is likely to go through.

For once the question of billing won't furnish a snag. When stars of Wallie Beery's caliber are willing to share credit with Jackie, Jack Warner can afford to make concessions.

"Limpy" is a story by William Johnston and will be directed by Harry Pollard. Eddie Mannix is supervising.

If Chic plays the role, he'll return to Hollywood directly after his personal appearance engagement in the East. This should enable him to report for work by Feb. 6.

IF YOU'VE BEEN THERE, YOU KNOW.

On his way East, El Brendel had to cross the Mojave Desert. What every traveler has felt, El neatly sums up in the following wire:

"Looks like somebody has been through here with a broom."

GOSSIP OF CINEMALAND.

The best creative talent in the Hollywood gown shops has been drafted to furnish exclusive designs for the stars to wear at the party of the Mayfair Club. The men have it easier. Many are going in overalls and tuxedo coats. Eddie Cline is having a suit made of foreign paper money. Eleanor Boardman sails with Dolores Del Rio for Hawaii. She decided

"The Bird of Paradise"...Jesse Lasky, Jr., is the censorship editor at Paramount. His job is to keep up on the latest verbiage from the Hays office...Edna May Oliver has one of those recording devices in her home. Instead of writing letters to her friends, she sends them messages on a phonograph record...Ric Cortez makes the dentist pull a towel over his face (Ric's) so he can't see the instruments coming...Frank Albertson's mustache is growing apace—about the pace of a century plant.... Ruth Mannix, pretty blond niece of Eddie Mannix, is M-G-M's newest contract player...Jackie Cooper thinks his Ma ought to make him wear a beret.

FENTON PLANNING TRIP.

Three years ago, Leslie Fenton startled Hollywood by abandoning a flourishing career to go on a vagabond trip around the world. Now, with his career re-established, he again plans to take to the road. Before that, however, he will do a few pictures and get some money in the bank. One of these will be "Tinsel Lady," which, incidentally, is Leslie's fifth in a row at Warners. The next time he leaves, Leslie wants to cross the Atlantic in a 40-foot sloop.

JOBS FOR THESE PLAYERS.

The day brings news that Dorothy Revier will go into the cast of "Night Club" at Universal. This probably is the part Estelle Taylor would have had but for her unfortunate accident.

Over at Warners' Darryl Zanuck has signed John Wray to play in Eddie Robinson's new one, "Two Seconds."

This story will portray the kaleidoscope of a condemned man's thoughts in the two seconds before he is hanged.

Another bit of casting at Universal puts Earle Fox and Zasu Pitts in Tom Mix's picture, "Destry Rides Again."

DID YOU KNOW

"Choosey" People like the way they TASTE...

IT'S just what you'd expect. People who enjoy the good things of life...are constantly looking for something better to eat and drink...and smoke. Something that's out of the ordinary.

In cigarettes this better taste can come only from finer ingredients. Chesterfields are more satisfying to the cultivated palate...because there's never any attempt to skimp on Turkish leaf.

These more expensive...more richly flavored Turkish tobaccos are added with a generous hand...and "choosey" people...everywhere...like the result.

In fact Chesterfield's new way of mingling tobacco flavors and aromas is really equivalent to creating an entirely new kind of tobacco...one that combines the best qualities of Turkish and fine Domestic leaf.

Perhaps you've noticed that the paper in Chesterfields is whiter...purer. Thousands of dollars were spent on research to perfect this paper. It burns without any taste or odor of its own. A detail, of course. But it adds immeasurably to your enjoyment.

Smoke Chesterfields whenever you like... They're mild and pure. They'll never tire you as an over-sweetened cigarette might easily do. Day in...day out...Chesterfields taste right. Light up and see for yourself. They satisfy!

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and snaky and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of sweet, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels, thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blotches. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes these good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

SIMPLE FABRICS ARE MAKING UP THE NEW FROCKS FOR THEATRE

Dull Silk, Crinkly Crepes, and Soft Wool Are Being Used

PARIS.—Theatre frocks for fashionable midwinter wear in Paris are not fancy ones. Fashioned from simple fabrics such as the new dull silk, crinkly crepes and even soft wool like the old-time muffs veiling, they are daintily discreet and simple, smart.

The Duchesse de Nemours, one of the best-dressed women in the capital, was seen at the Chic Theatre St. Georges recently in Worth's black and white velvet tunic, a moulded sheath with trailing panels.

The Comtesse Robert de Ganay has been wearing black chiffon with a modest square neckline and short sleeves. At the front is a flat bow of pink velvet and the frock is stirred from a high waistline to the hipbone. Schiaparelli is making simple theatre frocks of rayon jersey which looks like cotton in white and like wool in colours. Net and lace make some others and Vionnet uses a white lame with gold or silver sheen.

A dark blue tulle is worn by the Princess Coloredo-Mansfield, the lode high and the neckline ending just below the base of the throat and the neck and armholes embroidered with beads.

Directly in line is a pale grey crinkly crepe theatre gown with a standing fold of the crepe under which is the very short bolero jacket of plain red velvet. The jacket closes diagonally and fastens with a clip at the left side.

Cowl drapery is very graceful on a theatre frock of white georgette, corresponding with the backward sweep of the skirt.

RAMBLERS OPEN SEASON WITH WIN

(By T. M. Juno)

The newly-organized Ramblers basketball five opened their season in fine fashion last night, topping the All-Mulligans by the score of 24-18 on the Hibernians' floor. In the first game of the night the A. O. H. Cubs scored an extra-period 36-21 win over the Third Ward five.

The Ramblers five outplayed the Mulligans from the start and with the exception of a last ditch rally put on by the losers were the aggressors throughout. At half-time, the Ramblers held a 13-12 edge and after the second half began they scored eight points while the Mulligans could only make one, giving the winners a 21-14 lead.

A rally by the Mulligans brought their score up but they could not head off the Ramblers who had a commanding lead. E. Spadaccino led the winners with five double-deckers and a foul shot for eleven points. John Mulligan with six points was high scorer for the losers.

The Ramblers would like to hear from team in this locality for games. Anyone wishing games, kindly get in touch with Angelo Nicols, 237 Franklin street.

Tragedy and Comedy Both Have Place in Allen Trial

NORRISTOWN, Feb. 4.—Tragedy and comedy are the features of the Allen trial which today will read its first act when the Commonwealth reads its case against Edward H. B. Allen, accused of slaying Francis A. Donaldson, 3d.

The court room drama is a masterpiece and, like all good theatres, has the proper mixture of tears and laughter. The main thread is grim, of course, but there are light moments. A sister faces a brother and flings at him his threat to kill her fiancé. The witness relates how he looked up and saw the same gun that killed his friend pointing at him. "What did you do?" "I went out of the door."

From the back of the court room comes a whisper, "and who wouldn't?" then there are titters.

The gun is produced. Surely this is enough to sober any crowd. The District Attorney handles the gun and its double barrel is pointed into the face of the defense attorney. "Point it the other way," he says, hurriedly, pushing it from him.

The muzzle faces the judge; he looks worried. "See if there are any shells in it."

Then the gun faces the witness; he reaches for it gingerly. This is too much, the crowd laughs; the strain is snapped.

One of the most important parts is expected today when Horace Allen, aged father of the prisoner takes the stand for the defense. Allen, Sr., whose health has been so bad since the shock of the event of November 9th, has been given digitalis regularly to stimulate the action of his tired heart, has been making every effort to hold up physically until the boy's fate is learned. But concern over Eddie has been grave, knowing his daughter R. has not definitely forgiven him. He had to sit in court yesterday and hear the girl ascribe to her brother a desire to kill Donaldson three hours before the tragedy took place.

Uses Mitt Game as Pathway to M. D.

The recent knockout of Tommy Loughran has focused the eyes of the sports world on his conqueror, Steve Hamas, the up and coming young heavyweight who startled the fans with his two-round K. O. of the famed Philadelphia. Steve, former Penn State collegian, has a remarkable record of twenty-four knockouts in twenty-seven ring battles and without a loss chalked up against him. Hamas is also one of the best educated fistic stars, having graduated from Penn State with an A. B. and an ambition to study medicine. It was this ambition that spurred him to turn professional a year and a half ago. Steve hopes his ring earnings will permit him to carry on with his studies and also keep his bride of three months, the former Kathryn L. Work, of New York, in caviar. Mrs. Hamas, an accomplished sportsman and pianist, has never seen Steve fight, her courage having failed her on the one occasion she attempted to watch him in a bout. Hamas is twenty-three years old and a natural athlete. He held the intercollegiate heavyweight boxing title for 1927 and 1929, played fullback on the Penn State varsity football team, excelled in the shot put, hammer throw and javelin and also starred in basketball and lacrosse while at college. Will Steve add the heavyweight crown to his laurels?
